The Ladies' Fair.

Yesterday evening we attended the fair for the benefit of the Episcopal Church, managed by a number of the ladies of Pioche. A better choice of a place for holding it than Brown's Hall, or a better arrangement of the beautifully decorated tables which met the eye on every side, could not have been made. On entering the hall we found ourself lost amidst a crowd of charming ladies and liberal gentlemen. The first object, and perhaps the most beautiful (artificial) one which attracted our attention was a large wreath of exquisitely formed, and by her presented, to be sold at auction. Near this wreath was a leather-work frame enclosing a chromo. The work on this frame shows really delicate taste. as well as much skill on the part of the lady who presented it, Mrs. J. R. James. There were many, many other beautiful and artistic works, to record all of which would fill our paper. And now we came to

THE TARGES. The table for the sale of fancy articles was comparatively wellnigh cleared when we came. We noticed, however, among many other articles, a very pretty bed-stead for a doll, the name of the donor of which we disremember, with a very pretty coveriet, etc., worked by Miss B. Buck. A protty cradle, presented by Miss G. Coffice, was also worthy of note. This table was attended by Mrs. Halpin and Mrs. Hardware, and Mrs. Hereford,

The next object which attracted our attention was the ice-cream table, where the delicious cream, made cooler and sweeter by the hands that served it, was presided over by Mrs. Connerton and Miss Jacobs.

In the center of the room was a rastiarbor, containing a mossy well. Here Mrs. Curts and Miss Alba Bibb gave to thirsty travelers a smile and glass of lemonade, reminding one of "Rebecca
